Hahn Commemorates Memorial Day

Following is the text of a Memorial Day speech by Supervisor Kenneth Hahn at the County Hall of Administration:

One hundred years ago we had a great Civil War to preserve the Union, involving the dignity of human beings and the God-given rights of liberty and justice to every American.

It was a bloody and cruel war, fought with guns and bayonets. Tens of thousands of Americans died. Hundreds of thousands were wounded.

It was a war to resolve certain basic truths. Abraham Lincoln formalized these truths when he signed the Emancipation Proclamation in 1862. With the great power of his signature, he attempted to quell for all times, for all Americans, the clash of human dignity which split a nation.

Following the terrible Civil War the women of both the South and North paused to honor the dead by decorating graves of the fallen with flowers.

All Americans Whether blue or gray, Rebel or Yankee, they were all Americans.

And that is how Memorial Day came about — the result of a great and terrible war among brothers.

Today, 100 years later, we are still having battles in our minds and hearts and souls over human rights. There is great friction between individuals over the dignity of the human being.

But today, the battles are being fought with picket lines, dogs, fire hoses. These weapons are employed to deny human beings the right to enroll in colleges, to vote. Basic truth and understanding impress upon us that we should honor all men; we should respect and love one another and fear God.

This is truth; this is right.
